Summary of Module

This module provides students with the knowledge they require to have a firm grasp of the foundations, sources and structures of Scots law and the Scottish Legal System, including the criminal and civil justice systems in Scotland and core concepts such as the rule of law, access to justice and human rights.

Students undertaking this module will be introduced to the nature and sources of Scots law, the application of judicial precedent and the principles of statutory interpretation, offering opportunities to explore this knowledge in a range of legal contexts. Beyond this, it examines the roles and structure of Scottish courts and tribunals, as well as the way the legal profession in Scotland is structured, regulated and supervised, and the challenges it faces.

This module will aid students in the development of foundational skills necessary for studying law. Students will learn about good practice for file management, note-taking and studying and will learn how to find, interpret, use and reference sources of law.

Finally, the module will introduce students to the routes into the legal profession, to the different legal personnel and routes into different legal careers, and to alternative career options for law graduates.

The module will adopt a blended means of delivery whereby students will be expected to attend lectures and participate in in-person workshops supplemented by a range of online teaching materials. Lectures (1 hour) and workshops (2 hours) will be delivered weekly covering all of the topics. Students are expected to prepare for the workshops through attendance at the relevant lecture and engagement with the online teaching materials. In the workshops students will engage in active learning through a range of problem-solving activities and engage in critical debate on the topics being explored.
