Summary of Module

From Page to Stage is designed to equip students with a knowledge and understanding of a range of theatrical movements, practitioners, genres, styles, and structures. Module activities will be based on exploring play texts in a range of contexts, such as contemporary adaptation of classic texts and productions. Throughout the module, students are encouraged to consider their emerging knowledge in terms of applying it in a rehearsal studio, workshop, or classroom setting.

The content is explored from the perspectives of actor, director, and designer. For example, in taking a text from page to stage, students will explore rehearsal techniques for actors, directorial concepts and approaches, and how design also 'performs'.

Assessment (also refer to Assessment Outcomes Grids below)

Assessment 1

Students will present a concept document (approx. 1000 words) which outlines plans for a staged scene from a play text explored during the module. The concept document should include details such as directorial approaches, planned rehearsal techniques for actors, and incorporation of design elements. The document should include annotated texts, details of specific exercises, sketches, and any other material relevant to the chosen text. (40%) (ILO1, ILO2, ILO4)

Assessment 2

students will use their concept document (assessment A) to stage their chosen scene for performance. Working with their peers, students will be assessed on their application of the techniques outlined in the concept document, demonstrating the role of director responsible for realising artistic intentions. As students will take roles as actors for each other, they will also gain valuable experience in exploring practical techniques relating to a director's artistic vision. The scene should last approximately 10 minutes. (60%) (ILO 1, ILO3, ILO5)

(N.B. (i) Assessment Outcomes Grids for the module (one for each component) can be found below which clearly demonstrate how the learning outcomes of the module will be assessed.

(ii) An indicative schedule listing approximate times within the academic calendar when assessment is likely to feature will be provided within the Student Module Handbook.)
