Summary of Module

This module provides an overview of international criminal law. You will be introduced to the principles of international criminal law, the institutions designed to enforce it and the substantive law of the four 'core' international crimes (genocide, crimes against humanity, war crimes and aggression). In addition, the module considers key cases, as well as impediments to the prosecution of international crimes, critiques of international criminal law and the future of international criminal law.

The module aims not only to ensure that you understand the key aspects of international criminal law but also that you can apply these to real-world situations. Beyond this, the module is designed to ensure that you develop skills which will be useful outside the classroom such as confidence in public speaking, analysis of complex issues and the ability to engage with and discuss conceptually challenging topics.

This module is developed in accordance with the UWS Graduate Attributes and will allow you to develop the range of skills, qualities and abilities which will prepare you for success both outwith university and beyond your period of study at UWS. This module will help develop academic skills such as gaining knowledge, being a critical thinker, being analytical, being a problem solver, being digitally literate and being an autonomous learner.

This module aims:

- To equip students of the module with knowledge of the principles of international criminal law, its core crimes, key institutions and main critiques.
- To ensure students who undertake the module are able to understand and explain the international criminal law aspects of current events and international affairs.
- To develop students' knowledge of aspects of public international law.

This module will be delivered by means of twelve interactive seminars lasting two hours. These seminars are intended to enable students to develop their skills in critical thinking, analysis and reasoning. Students are expected to prepare fully in advance of each weekly seminar and will be expected to present to the class in a number of ways at times during the trimester, individually and in groups.
