Summary of Module

Students will extend their knowledge and understanding of key concepts from a range of theoretical approaches in cultural, communication and media studies. Students will acquire a critical terminology which can be applied to the study of literature, media and popular culture, and analyse within the fields of literature, media and popular culture with its accent on Film and Music studies. Students will examine historical and current approaches to embedding sound, music and film and will be required to utilise skills from previous modules (or equivalent for progressing level 9 direct entrants) to produce a piece of audiovisual material which includes: planning, resource allocation, skills sourcing, recording original dialogue, sounds and music and compiling them into a professional standard artefact to add to their PDP portfolio.

The module is open to technicians as well as non-technicians. Students work in 'production teams working towards replacing all soundtrack elements of a given 10-minute film including: Foley, Score, SFX and ADR. Assessment includes the final artifact, a portfolio (making of ) and a personal essay on a composer/sound design/genre of their choice. Introduction of students to the academic study of film music analysis in the first few weeks of the module and practical postproduction techniques as the module develops.
