Summary of Module
This module is an opportunity for students to share their creative practice, to identify and enhance their strengths and interests as artists, and to become aware of some of the wider practicalities – such as creating a company, funding structures, festival ecologies, and production skills – involved in creating work in professional contexts. With the support of the teaching team, students will form self-directed ‘companies’, negotiating and consolidating their own practice to deliver a professional performance outcome as part of a festival of performance for a public audience at Ayr Campus. This module serves as a culmination of the learning in Performance Practice 1 (Text Based) & 2 (Devising) and allows all students the opportunity to create their own work in response to a festival commission brief, using a variety of styles and modes of performance, and exploring various creative, technical, and production roles involved in creating performance.
