Summary of Module

The module "Your Professional Learning Environment" is an exciting opportunity for you to create a personalised learning plan that aligns with your goals and identifies areas for growth. This module invites you to identify areas where your own individual learning and development needs could be enhanced, providing each learner with the opportunity to scaffold their own learning, with resources and staff support. The module introduces and provides a selection of tools and techniques to enhance your self-awareness and enable you to articulate your learning needs effectively. Through the module you will gain clarity on potential areas of growth based on prior practice and be able to identify your next steps and future goals, ultimately leading to a more focused and purposeful professional development journey.

Through continual engagement with your ePortfolio, you will explore definitions and models of reflection and reflexivity and consider how you can extend these approaches and practices with relevance within your own professional context.

Through the module, we will explore the ways that reflection goes beyond simply recalling or describing an event; it is a process of introspection, retrospection, and prospection. It involves looking inward at oneself, looking back at past events, and looking forward at possible futures. This means that for learning, it is important to reflect not only on what has been learned, but also on the learning process as a whole. Through reflection, learners can analyse and evaluate what has been done, make sense of what happened, draw on theoretical concepts or prior learning, and inform future action to learn from the experience.

Your ePortfolio will allow you to accumulatively capture, record and evidence your own learning journey as you develop as a professional practitioner. As well as being a space to consider and plan your own steps to success, you will also be encouraged to consider your own practice in relation to others. In the complex web of professional contexts, community settings, and personal relationships, it is crucial to recognise the reciprocal influence that our actions and practices have on others. By developing an understanding of these dynamics, we can cultivate greater sensitivity and responsiveness in our work, fostering a culture of mutual support and growth. Questions and considerations of this will be facilitated by interactive worksheets, templates, prompts, activities, and exercises all housed within the ePortfolio. There will also be space within your portfolio to document your ongoing engagement with your peers, through facilitated activities and events. Within your portfolio, you will have both a private space to capture your own thoughts and progress, and also a 'published view', where you can curate and present material which you wish to submit as part of your final assessment ePortfolio.

Through the final ePortfolio you submit, you'll showcase your progress as you've identified and operationalised your own professional learning journey. As a professional dialogue demonstrating your own deepened understanding of practice, you'll demonstrate your ability to plan for success in pursuing your professional goals and aspirations. Your ePortfolio serves a dual purpose, however while it provides evidence of your achievement of the module's learning outcomes, it also serves as a valuable resource to support your discussions with your Professional Academic Advisor during your annual personal review. By reflecting on your learning journey and documenting your progress to date, you will be able to articulate your growth, development, and professional aspirations more effectively, enabling you to plan for success and make informed decisions about your future professional learning needs.

Learning and Teaching

In line with current learning and teaching principles, a 20-credit module includes 200 learning hours, normally including a minimum of 36 contact hours and maximum of 48 contact hours.

The module will provide an integrated learning and teaching experience, offering a variety of opportunities for both formative and summative feedback, including from staff and peer group. You will engage in a series of formative tasks and activities that will support work towards the summative assessment. Note, activity throughout this module is designed to prepare and provide guidance to learners as they begin to engage in planning for a research and inquiry-based project.

In this module you will engage in a range of teaching and learning experiences. These consist of:

• 2 hours of one-to-one tutorials with module staff (this is out with your Personal Academic Advisor sessions, though these may support module activity);

• a minimum of 6 hours engagement with live (synchronous) activity, from a programme of module-based workshops and events (which may include skills improvement sessions, spotlight talks, group discussion seminars, short lectures, practical workshops). Learners are welcome to select from the range of live sessions events which will run through their time on the module. You can engage and return to any of these sessions as required as they will run in cycles throughout the year. The majority of these will also be recorded for reference, which you can access post attendance.

• A series of asynchronous activities which will be found within your ePortfolio. These activities will include worksheets with suggested tasks and prompts, reading and video material, checklists and templates to support your progress, and frameworks to scaffold your own reflections.

• Independent study to continue to progress and develop all other module activities, and to prepare for final assessment and submission of portfolio.

Further information on the module learning activities are outlined in the module handbook.

Assessment (also refer to Assessment Outcomes Grids below)

Assessment 1

The summative assessment for this module is an essay based on your ePortfolio that documents your progress, engagement, and learning in relation to a personalised professional learning plan. The ePortfolio will include a reflective account that demonstrates your ability to critically evaluate your own practice, identify areas for growth, and articulate your professional learning journey. You can use a range of both written and audio-visual material to do this. The ePortfolio will serve as evidence of your achievement of the module learning outcomes.
