Summary of Module
This module explores approaches to developing children’s communication and literacy skills, considering both verbal and non-verbal forms of communication. Students will be introduced to fundamental linguistic terms and encouraged to expand their metalinguistic awareness. They will develop an understanding of the processes involved in listening, speaking, reading and writing development, critically engaging with current debates in language education. Theoretical perspectives including early representation, symbolism, emergent writing, and the role of play in language acquisition will be explored. Additionally, the module will address communication in multilingual contexts. Students will examine research on the importance of maintaining children’s home languages and evaluate best practices for supporting language development in more than one language. Key policy frameworks, such as Learning in 2+ Languages (Education Scotland, 2020), will be used to assess effective approaches. The role of social and cultural events in fostering literacy development will also be considered.
