Summary of Module
This module is designed to develop the skills, knowledge, and expertise of dental nurses to enable them to evaluate the social determinants that influence general and oral health. This will enable the dental nurse to use initiative to influence the planning and delivery of oral health promotion activities with the use of technology targeted at a range of individual patients.
The student will apply a theory of health promotion to facilitate the delivery of holistic oral health advice across a variety of client groups. The student will be expected to evaluate and apply contemporary approaches to health promotion activities for an oral health topic. This includes participation in a range of dental related health promotion and technology-based activities to empower overall oral health and wellbeing. The module will include technology enabled care to assist in patient education, acknowledging, that it provides interactive personalised and accessible resources and tools to empower patients with knowledge and understanding of their oral health.
The dental nurse will understand the benefits of technology-enabled care, improved treatment outcomes, increased patient satisfaction, and better oral health management. The benefits and limitations of using technology enabled care are also explored.
Technology enabled care is being integrated into dental patient care, offering benefits in diagnostics, treatment planning, patient management, and patient education. This includes learning and teaching in relation to the use of interactive educational tools, visualisation and simulation, personalised treatment plans, remote telephone consultations and health monitoring devices.
