Summary of Module

This module includes: the development of personality and the impact of early childhood experiences on the development of personality; nature versus nurture debate, genetics and temperament; learning theory; attachment and childhood experiences – child and adolescent development; adult experiences and relationships – including gender differences; describing personality- what is it?; the limits of diagnostic classifications and trauma; how do interpersonal difficulties arise; personal relationships and setting boundaries; attitudes and myths regarding treatability of personality disorder; offending behaviour; people with Learning Disability and associated offending behaviour. The concepts of risk will be introduced in this module, including risk to self, others and vulnerability. The full spectrum of personality disorders will be covered.

The continued marginalisation and exclusion of this group of service users will be discussed within this module. Service user perspectives are considered crucial to providing a more balanced and inclusive approach to care and treatment and as such will feature in this module.

Throughout the module, students will be building on their existing skills in acquiring and developing knowledge and skills while demonstrating graduate attributes. These include being open to new ideas, methods and ways of thinking and be prepared to ask crucial questions and use an appropriate rationale to support their ideas.

Learning and Teaching
In line with current learning and teaching principles, a 20-credit module includes 200 learning hours, normally including a minimum of 36 contact hours and maximum of 48 contact hours. The module will be delivered using a blended learning approach, using a combination of on-line and taught sessions. The learning and teaching strategy has been designed to promote graduate attributes and stimulate reflective and analytical thinking. It is envisaged that the student will be at the centre of the teaching process in order to develop skills that facilitate lifelong learning. Learning and teaching will be student centred, recognising the wealth of knowledge and experience students may already have at their disposal. Discussion and group working strategies will be encouraged in order to capitalise on this rich resource. Other learning methods will include lectures, seminars, presentations, case study and enquiry based approaches. The work of the experienced teaching team will be augmented by a group of practitioners from the School of Forensic Mental Health (SoFMH) and across the Forensic Network. Reasonable adjustments will be made for students assessed to require enabling strategies to be put in place.

Attendance and Engagement Requirements

In line with the Student Attendance and Engagement Procedure, Students are academically engaged if they are regularly attending and participating in timetabled on-campus and online teaching sessions, asynchronous online learning activities, course-related learning resources, and complete assessments and submit these on time.

For the purposes of this module, academic engagement equates to the following:

The university is committed to providing a supportive learning environment that actively facilitates student success. In this module, there is a high degree of student-led flexibility. You are academically engaged if you are regularly engaged with scheduled live sessions on-campus and online, including engaging with online learning activities in your own time, course-related learning resources, and with timely completion and submission of assessments. Whilst we understand that there may be times when conflicting priorities make participation challenging, for you to gain the most from this module it is recommended that you participate in all scheduled live classes and complete your self-directed learning activities in a timely manner. It may be difficult to pass the assessment associated with this module if you are not regularly engaging with the module work and live classes. We may reach out to check how things are going and offer support if we observe that you have not been attending sessions or completing online activities.

Equality and Diversity

The University's Equality, Diversity and Human Rights Procedure can be accessed at the following link: UWS Equality, Diversity and Human Rights Code.

In line with current legislation (Equality Act, 2010) and the UWS Equality, Diversity, and Human Rights Code, our modules are accessible and inclusive, with reasonable adjustment for different needs where appropriate. Module materials comply with University guidance on inclusive learning and teaching, and specialist assistive equipment, support provision and adjustment to assessment practice will be made in accordance with UWS policy and regulations

(N.B. Every effort will be made by the University to accommodate any equality and diversity issues brought to the attention of the School)
